His capacity for making congress take care of his onstituents is a proverb in Tennessee. He isn't a man who gets up on the floor of the house every day or so and tears off about eight yards of purple and gold cratory. Neither does he introduce a bill a minute and wander round the capitol waving them in the air and demanding that he be recogpixed at once for all of them.

No, he doesn't do these things, but by himself. Why, it has come to be a saying around the capitol that every time Walter Brownlow discovers a neglected graveyard in his district he immediately imbues it with historic interest and proceeds to give it to a grateful federal government, "absolute ly free, gentlemen, absolutely free.
